Background

Situated in the town of Alfaro in the La Rioja province of Northern Spain, the co-operative was established in 1987 by six families with backgrounds in farming who wished to produce wines of the highest quality. Using grapes sourced solely from the co-operative's own vineyards, they are able to specify the exact viticultural decisions to be made. In 2004, they set up their own winery so that they could extend this careful monitoring and dedication to the winemaking process. Being able to oversee the entire production process, from grape to glass, enables the co-operative families to produce the high quality wines that their ancestors wished. The region is located on the banks of the fertile Ebro valley, which contributes a wide diversity of soils and microclimates. Strongly influenced by a Mediterranean climate, the Rioja Baja is the warmest and driest of the three Rioja regions.

The estate strive to lower their impact on the environment when producing their wines and have been slowly converting to organic viticulture parcel by parcel. They currently have 18 hectares converted. They also generate 30% of their own electricity through solar panels and using up to 70% recycled material in all their packaging.

Winemaking

After gentle pressing, temperature controlled fermentation occurs in stainless steel tanks followed by 3 months maturation on fine lees to build complexity.

Tasting & Pairing

Bright and pale with aromas of crisp green apple, pear and lemon. Background notes of peach and slight nutty character. A well balanced wine with a good finish.

A good aperitif and also with grilled fish and seafood.
