Producer

Cédric Allion owns this small, but bustling estate, overseeing the vineyards and the winemaking himself.

Climate, viticulture, winemaking

The estate is situated in the Cher Valley, a tributary of the river Loire, in the village of Thésée, also called Thésée la Romaine, because it has ruins from the 2nd century Gallo-Roman age. At this time, Thésée was located on one of the main trade routes halfway between Tours and Bourges and was relatively prosperous.

Grapes are hand-harvested and gently stored in crates before slow pressing. Only the first press juice is used. Fermentation at low temperature, bottling for the second fermentation following the traditional method. Disgorgement after 18 to 24 months and brut dosage.

Tasting Notes

Pale with green hints, accompanied by an effervescence on the palate. Elegant fruit and honeysuckle on the nose, very gentle and delicate.

Good to know

Cédric owns 5 hectares of certified organic vineyards and follows rigorous sustainable practices within the vineyard and winery including the use of eco-responsible products to promote biodiversity; such as using micro-organisms to rapidly increase the humus content in soil and thus fertility. Water, fuel and energy is used as efficiently and with little impact on the surrounding environment.

Vegetarian and vegan friendly.
