Climate, viticulture, winemaking

Wines produced by Tallero come from grapes grown on the hills of the Treviso region of North East Italy, in a mild and diverse territory. The alluvial soil is predominately clay with an abundance of mineral content to provide the perfect terrain.

Once picked, the grapes are lightly pressed with only the must from the first pressing being used. The must is kept at a low temperature and allowed to clear, then the yeast is added and the wine becomes sparkling after 4 weeks in pressurised tanks.

Tasting Notes

Pale straw in colour with a persistent mousse. Floral aromas with peach and pear fruit on the palate.
